

July 7, 2006

Coming Out

The closet has been known to house many a deep, dark secret (and not just in Hollywood).

Your skin-tight, frat-party-hopping black pants from freshman year, for example.

When it comes to airing out your fashion skeletons, turn to wardrobe consultant Margaret Lilly of Lilly's Closet. Offering everything from basic editing and personal shopping to full-fledged image makeovers, Lilly specializes in working with any body type and within any budget. (She's even been known to work wonders with a grungy boyfriend.)

Better yet, Lilly operates a "fashion emergency hotline" for clients. Need to know if those black wedges go with your navy skirt for tonight's date or if the jacket you're trying on is worth the $400 price tag? Lilly guarantees a response to calls and e-mails within an hour, so you can get yourself out of the closet and on to having fun as soon as possible.

And isn't that how it should be?
Lilly's Closet (703-969-3087 or lillysclosetonline.com).

P.S. The opening of Lia's Restaurant, as reported in Wednesday's item, has been delayed. We apologize for any inconvenience.

DailyCandy is strictly editorial. There is no pay for play.

TODAY IN EVERYWHERE
Lost and Found

